ABOUT THE PROJECT

Founded in 1949, Arizona's Grand Canyon University has recently experienced an explosion of growth. Today, the school is ten times the size it was just six years ago. The university's seating needs have skyrocketed, too. When the school launched a five-story College of Arts & Sciences building to accommodate its growth, it needed seating for classrooms and break rooms. Fortunately, the versatile selection at SitOnIt Seating meant this didn't have to be a complicated purchase.

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE?

The school was already familiar with the SitOnIt Seating Anytime chair. They were used as break room chairs because they are easy to clean, easy to move (with optional wheels) and came in a wide variety of colors. People at the college liked the break room chairs so much, in fact, that the chairs were often found after students – or faculty – had wheeled them into their own rooms or offices.

The chair has a few features that make it ideal for a college setting. Anytime has a large seat which makes it comfortable for break rooms, but also accommodates all sizes of students. Since it comes in both a task chair and a stool, it can be used in different parts of the classroom – for example, at the podium at the front of the class. And the wide selection of textiles that SitOnIt Seating offers makes the chair a versatile choice. In Grand Canyon University classrooms, Anytime is usually featured in plum to coordinate with the school colors.

WHAT'S NEXT

Recognizing the chair's versatility, Grand Canyon University has now standardized on Anytime. And with the school continuing to grow, new classrooms need seating in 2014. With projects like these, SitOnIt Seating is building a strong reputation in education.

Time Frame: Oct 2012 – July 2013
Product: Anytime, Social

ABOUT THE PROJECT

Penn State University is a campus in constant flux. With nearly 100,000 students, the college frequently replaces its seating and is always looking for a way to update its style. Procurement at the university has worked with dealer Supply Source, Inc. over the years to update and change seating at the college. For renovation of the Moore Building, which houses the Psychology Department, the department was looking for seating for everything from the conference rooms, to computer labs and study areas.

Jennifer Peck at Supply Source, Inc. began working with the college, determining its priorities. Budget was key. Anytime fit the bill.

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE?

Penn State's goal was to find versatile, customizable chairs at a great price. Because Supply Source, Inc. is a trusted source, the university went with their recommendation and had sample chairs brought in for a sit test. Both Anytime and Social came out winners – Anytime as a versatile solution for lounges and classrooms and Social, with its clean design, as an office side chair.

The university decided to go with neutral and black fabrics to match the interior design they had in mind for the building. The ease of customization with SitOnIt Seating meant that the university could personalize seating without extra cost. With the students away, the university moved in the new chairs in July, 2013.

WHAT'S NEXT

There are always projects ahead at Penn State. The college has already chosen SitOnIt Seating for a number of projects because of the quality and expert sales reps who help with pricing. And because SitOnIt Seating works within budget, everyone from the architect to facilities can breathe easy.
